Peace march

Student-led anti-violence effort seeks to fund film

Chicago Tribune

"Do you think you're going to die this summer?"

That's a question that 17-year-old Razia Hutchins, a student at Perspectives Charter Schools in Chicago, says she often hears classmates ask one another this time of year.

"Some of their responses are like, 'Yes,' " said Hutchins, who lives in Auburn-Gresham. "Living in Chicago, it's like I know at any point my life can be taken away by gun violence."

It's a mindset she and her friends at the school hope to change with a student-led initiative they're calling "I Am for Peace."

On Sunday morning, Hutchins made a personal appeal for congregants at Salem Baptist Church to join more than 2,000 students from the school's five campuses in a June 5 peace march and support a Kickstarter campaign to finance a documentary about their efforts to combat violence in the community.

The march, which is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m., will go through what Hutchins called one of Chicago's "war zones," from 22nd and State streets to 36th Street and Wabash Avenue.

"Salem, I am so scared I won't see my friends next school year," Hutchins said during a service at the church in Pullman, at 752 E. 114th St. "Me and my friends need your help. Help us stop the violence in Chicago."

The campaign aims to raise $35,000 for the documentary, which will tell the stories of Perspectives students and violence in their neighborhoods and document the "I Am for Peace" initiative and march, according to Perspectives board member Cheryl Jackson, who formerly served as president and chief executive officer of the Chicago

"I am so scared I won't see my friends next school year."

Urban League.

The group then plans to submit the documentary to film festivals and release it in the community.

"What makes this march very intriguing is the fact that young people are afraid that they're not going to see their peers reach adulthood," said the Rev. James Meeks, pastor at Salem. "It says that our society is in trouble, but there's reason for optimism."

Meeks likened the peace march to the civil rights movement, saying that when people saw younger generations being attacked by dogs and with fire hoses, it made a world of difference.

"The consciousness of America said we have to stop Jim Crow," he said. "It has always been young people in America that have made a difference."

Hutchins said that while she and her friends have led small marches to raise awareness about bullying and violence before, this is the first time they're asking the community to get involved.

The group plans to reach out to congregations at other Chicago churches in the coming weeks to raise awareness about the march.

"Those who are perpetrating violence, we are bigger than they are," Jackson said.

"The violence has been with us for a while now, but I think what's different is our young people are seeing they can be involved."

How often do CTA officials ride the CTA?

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

tswartz@tribune.com
@tracyswartz

If you were given an unlimited-use Ventra card for free, how often would you ride the CTA?

If you're CTA board chairman Terry Peterson, the answer would be 17 times in eight months. If you're veteran CTA board member Alejandro Silva, it would be five times. If you're longtime CTA board member Rev. Charles Robinson, it would be zero times.

About half of the seven-member CTA board rode the system regularly from August to April, according to information Going Public obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request for the number of times CTA board members and officials used their CTA-issued Ventra cards in the eight-month period following the inception of CTA's new fare payment system.

In August, CTA board members and staff were among the first riders to receive Ventra cards. Board members and staff ride the system for free.

President Forrest Claypool used his CTA-issued Ventra card to ride the CTA 114 times between August and April. That averages out to a ride about every other day.

"[Claypool] takes it a couple of times a week. His schedule varies, but he does take the system regularly," said CTA spokeswoman Tammy Chase, adding that sometimes Claypool uses his personal Ventra card.

Peterson rode the CTA about once every two weeks. That is an improvement for him. In 2010, about six months into his first term as CTA board chairman, Peterson told GP he had not taken the CTA in a couple of years.

Other board members fared better. Longtime board member Jacky Grimshaw rode 92 times while Kevin Irvine and Ashish Sen, who were both appointed to the board in 2012, logged 370 and 161 rides, respectively. A seventh board member, retired Chicago Police Sgt. Robert Lewis, began his tenure earlier this year.

Board members did not return a request for comment made through a board liaison, but in the past, they have said presentations during monthly board meetings and other CTA material have helped inform their decisions, instead of just riding the system.

On Thursday, Ashish and Sen talked to riders at a hearing over the controversial proposed bypass near the Belmont stop in Lakeview.

The CTA says the bypass would ease Brown, Red and Purple line train travel. Residents are complaining, though, because the agency has targeted 16 buildings for demolition due to the project.

Ashish and Sen said they have not yet formed opinions on the proposed $320 million flyover.

Mayor Emanuel has voiced his support for the bypass. He says he is a regular Brown Line rider but his Ventra card is not subject to Freedom of Information Act requests because he pays for it.

Emanuel staffers say the mayor's card is registered, unlike his Chicago Card, which was not. Registered cards can be tracked if they are lost or stolen.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note
This week: Cicero Green Line

This Austin station has quite a few amenities, including two elevators, a bike rack near the turnstiles and Dunkin' Donuts on the bottom floor of the stationhouse, but there were no train trackers on the platform when GP visited Friday. Since train arrival information wasn't readily available, some riders were leaning their heads over the tracks to see if they could see an eastbound train. This is a dangerous practice that can lead to accidents. Regular announcements over CTA loudspeakers would help curb this practice.

Chicago police investigate a Monday accident in which a toddler was killed by a CTA bus after she darted into traffic. PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

Child killed by CTA bus

Chicago Tribune

Children play frequently in the parking lot of the apartment building on the 7700 block of South Shore Drive, away from the traffic streaming down the street.

Mothers there say they grab their children if they get too close to the road; others won't even let their kids play outside.

Parents on the block said their worst fears came true Monday when a 1-year-old girl darted into traffic and was struck and killed by a CTA bus.

"I heard the mother screaming and crying, saying, 'My baby! My baby!'" neighbor Kendra Rodriguez said. "If that was my child, I would have died."

As a crowd watched Chicago firefighters remove the victim from beneath the bus, bystanders said the accident appeared to happen when the girl's mother left her daughter briefly with a neighbor, who turned away for a moment just as the child ran off.

The bus was traveling north when the little girl ran into the street from the curb where a group of people were standing, Chicago Police News Affairs Officer Stacey Cooper said. The driver swerved to avoid contact, but the side of the accordion-style extended bus struck the child, pinning her underneath, police on the scene said.

The child, whose name was not immediately released, was pronounced dead on the scene. The driver was taken to University of Chicago hospital for unspecified reasons, Cooper said. Officers took the mother to a nearby house to interview her about the accident, and the major accidents unit was investigating.

A woman who told police on the scene that she was the child's great aunt questioned how this could happen, yelling, "You can't ... explain that to me, how you let my grand niece run into the street!"

South Shore Drive gets heavy traffic, neighbors said, because it leads to nearby Lake Shore Drive, and children walk through the area to a nearby school and to Rainbow Beach, where Memorial Day picnickers were barbecuing just a block from the scene of the accident.

Residents, some holding babies on their hips, suggested that a speed bump would slow traffic and a gate on the parking lot would help keep children safe, but in this case the child was across the street, outside another apartment building.

"This was a tragedy," neighbor Shante Drane said. "We're like a big family here. Everybody's kids play with everybody else. But kids move so fast."

CTA spokesman Steve Mayberry said it was too early to offer any details on the accident or the driver, but he said the transit agency was conducting its own investigation.

Mom charged with felony child endangerment

A Chicago mother has been charged with felony child endangerment in the overdose death of her 22-month-old daughter, Cook County authorities said. Jasmine Robinson, 23, had left her daughter and two other children at about 9 p.m. Feb. 14 with her bed-ridden husband. When she returned home in the 6900 block of South Jeffrey Boulevard the following day, Robinson found her daughter dead on a couch atop an empty bottle of methadone her husband used to control his pain, Assistant State's Attorney Colleen Rogers said Monday at bond court.

4 Chicago bars recognized

Four Chicago bars have been named as finalists for awards in one of the cocktail industry's most prestigious competitions, the Tales of the Cocktail Spirited Awards: Celeste for best new American cocktail bar; The Aviary for best American cocktail bar and world's best cocktail menu; Sable Kitchen & Bar for best American hotel bar and best American high volume cocktail bar; and Three Dots and a Dash for best new American cocktail bar, best American high volume cocktail bar and world's best cocktail menu. Winners will be announced July 19.

1 killed, 5 wounded in Monday shootings

One person was killed and five people were wounded Monday afternoon and evening in separate shootings on the West, Northwest and South sides, officials said. The fatality was a 33-year-old man who was shot about 3:18 p.m. near Lake Street and Laramie Avenue. He was pronounced dead about an hour later, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office.

Free Wi-Fi service arrives in Chicago

Gunman emailed his plans to parents, others before attacks

6 SANTA BARBARA, Calif. A man who killed six people in a California college town emailed his plans minutes before he went on a rampage, sending his parents racing to try to stop him and leaving a family friend wondering whether her son was an intended target, according to two interviews Sunday.

Elliot Rodger, 22, the son of Peter Rodger, a second unit director for "The Hunger Games," stabbed three people to death in his apartment before gunning down three more victims Friday night in the town of Isla Vista near the campus of the University of California at Santa Barbara. He then shot himself.

The Los Angeles Times reported the three stabbing victims were all students at UC Santa Barbara. They were identified as Cheng Yuan Hong, 20, of San Jose; George Chen, 19, of San Jose; and Weihang Wang, 20, of Fremont.

In all Rodger killed two women and four men, and wounded 13 people, including eight whom he shot as he sped through town in his black BMW, exchanging fire with police, authorities said.

Minutes before opening fire, the former community college student emailed a chilling manifesto to some 30 people including his mother, father and former teachers, said Cathleen Bloeser, 58, whose son was a childhood friend of the shooter and was included on the email chain.

In that document, Rodger said he planned to first kill his housemates, then lure others to his residence to continue the violence before slaughtering women in a sorority and continuing his spree in the streets of Isla Vista.

The manifesto, which details the fear Rodger felt that his guns might have been discovered when police visited him less than a month ago, was not the first indication that something was troubling him.

"We could see that he was turning," Bloeser said.

Ukraine launches air strikes against rebels

8 DONETSK, Ukraine Ukraine launched air strikes and a paratrooper assault against pro-Russian rebels who seized an airport Monday, as its newly elected leader rejected any talks with "terrorists" and said a robust military campaign in the east should be able to put down a separatist revolt in "a matter of hours."

Ukrainians rallied overwhelmingly in Sunday's election behind Petro Poroshenko, a political veteran and billionaire owner of chocolate factories, hoping the burly 48-year-old can rescue the nation from the brink of bankruptcy, civil war and dismemberment by its former Soviet masters in the Kremlin.

Monday's rapid military response to separatists who seized the airport in Donetsk was a defiant answer to Moscow, which said it was ready for dialogue with Poroshenko but demanded he first scale back the armed forces' campaign in the east.

Clearly, no one player is going to carry the Blackhawks past L.A. Jonathan Toews tried his best in Game 3. No go. That said, the Hawks could use more star power against the Kings.

Looking at you, Patrick Kane. The Kings have shut down the Hawks sharp-shooter; he had zero points in the first three games. "You could say he's been kept off," Kings coach Darryl Sutter told the Los Angeles Times. "We've done a good job against him. He's had some brilliant opportunities. Those guys like that, they only need those one or two [to get going]. ... We know that."

That likely wouldn't fly in Game 4 on Monday if the Hawks were to get even in this series. Did they have enough "showtime," as Kaner would say, to reclaim home-ice advantage?

This just in: Jeff Carter takes a shot that somehow doesn't go in. Sarcasm aside, Crawford does make a nice save to keep his team within shouting distance. Showtime meter: 6/10

L.A.'s defense

Even when the Blackhawks managed to get the puck into the L.A. zone, they look about as threatening as Kane's mullet. At some point you have to credit the Kings' relentless defense. That would be now. On their first three power plays, the Hawks muster just one measly shot. Showtime meter: 5/10

Brandon Saad's backhand

Finally, some life from the Hawks. They force the Kings into some sloppy play in their own zone. Michal Rozsival finds Brandon Saad, and Saad scoops it just under the crossbar. Showtime meter: 4/10

Score: Kings 4, Blackhawks 1

THIRD PERIOD

Quick's leg

Good news: The Blackhawks sustain some serious pressure on the Kings defense. Bad news: Quick is still spectacular. Showtime meter: 6/10

4 Bryan Bickell's timing

The big man pokes one past Quick to make it 4-2. Also: Patrick Kane records an assist. Repeat: Patrick Kane records an assist, his first point in the series. Showtime meter: 7/10

Coach Q's mustache

Because win or lose, Joel Quenneville's signature feature always keeps a stiff upper lip. Showtime meter: 8/10

Score: Kings 5, Blackhawks 2

Struggling with his playoff beard

1	Why have Patrick Kane and Patrick Sharp struggled against L.A.?	They're allergic to kale.	I BLAME THE BEARDS. Time to shave them into little Coach Q-esque mustaches.	The Kings are pa-tricking the Hawks offense! Yeah. That's all I got.	The same reason Kitty Pryde was able to send Wolverine back in time in the latest X-Men movie: There is none.	Maybe they keep accidentally stealing each other's passes.
2	Now that Andrew Shaw is back with the Blackhawks ...	... they can start the conference finals.	... Shaw needs to find a "shank" and get "redemption." See what I did there? "Shawshank Redemption"? Like the movie!	... we can sit Bollig now! Oh. No. Wait.	Seriously though, why make up powers for a character when Professor X could have done it?	... he can tell everyone where the Hawks offense is.
3	Who would pay $820 for Mark Sanchez's "butt fumble" jersey?	Me. I love butts!	Mark Sanchez. He probably wants to cherish his only claim to fame.	Somebody with an ass-ellent sense of humor.	Sanchez? So he could burn it?	Why was he wearing his jersey on his butt?
4	What will the World Cup be like without Landon Donovan?	Sensual.	Wait ... "world cup" ... is that some sort of sporting equipment?	Filled with rioting and vuvuzelas—is it any other way?	Like an X-Men movie without Wolverine! You assume it will be bad, but it isn't.	It probably will have more hair. I wish I had more hair.
5	Make a prediction for the French Open.	The winner is going to "love" it. Get it? Love is a tennis term.	Je ne parle pas français!	I have a hunch that a woman with a tough-to-pronounce eastern European last name will win!	It will make more money than "Man of Steel," just like the X-Men movie.	All the players are going to need new clothes. That day is filthy.

HELLO, GOODBYE

Two Chicago streaks were snapped, LeBron James has a new nemesis and there's a scooter bandit on the loose. That was your Monday in sports.

Say goodbye to ...

The Sky's unbeaten season. Sure, the defending Eastern Conference champs still are in great shape at 4-1, but they dropped their first game of the season Monday: 75-72 to undefeated Minnesota at Allstate Arena. This despite 16 points and 15 rebounds from Jessica Breland.

Jessica Breland

Say hello to ...

Jeff Samardzija's first win. Despite leading the major leagues with an insanely low 1.46 ERA entering Monday, the Cubs ace had zero wins to show for it. Not anymore. Samardzija pitched seven strong innings as the Cubs beat San Francisco 8-4—and the unlucky right-hander improved to 1-4 this season.

Jeff Samardzija
USA TODAY SPORTS

Say goodbye to ...

Hunter Pence's scooter. Someone stole the San Francisco Giants outfielder's preferred mode of transportation for getting to and from home games. "I did have a dream that I saw someone riding it and I tackled him," Pence told CSN Bay Area. "You can't control your dreams."

Lance Stephenson

Say hello to ...

The next phase of the Pacers-Heat rivalry. On Monday, Indiana shooting guard Lance Stephenson defended his trash-talking of LeBron James: he said the Miami star's trash-talking was a "sign of weakness." "When I talk junk, it makes me happier in my job," Stephenson said. "I like the challenge, I like to force myself to do my job." BTW, Miami throttled Indiana 102-90 on Monday to take a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

SUMMER MUSIC PREVIEW*The need-to-know songs, albums and bands of the season*By Ernest Wilkins | REDEYE

After enduring the worst winter of our Chicago lives, we all want to start the summer as soon as possible. And we'll need a soundtrack.

It would be easy to highlight big artists coming to town, like Beyoncé and Jay Z being all kinds of powerful July 24 at Soldier Field. Instead, we'll break down the albums you should watch for, the best bands appearing at street fests and playlists of songs you'll want to know for a wide variety of situations you may find yourself in, on purpose or by accident.

Fancy

Iggy Azalea feat. Charli XCX

It already IS the song of summer; you might as well accept it now. Resistance is futile.

Problem

Ariana Grande
feat. Iggy Azalea

Azalea extends her summer dominance by adding "street cred"—even though she's about as street as a cupcake store—to this bubblegum pop jam.

Summer

Calvin Harris

The electronic pop wizard continues his reign on the charts with this appropriately named tune.

Drink to That All Night

Jerrod Niemann
feat. Pitbull

Your requisite country-rap crossover. Consider this the 2014 version of Florida Georgia Line's "Cruise."

Sing

Ed Sheeran

A danceable tune with a strong collaboration from Pharrell (who co-wrote and produced)—where have we seen this before?

albums to watch

Disgraceland

The Drwells (June 3)

After winning David Letterman's affections, the Chicago rockers look to ascend to a new level of popularity with their major label debut.

Lazaretto

Jack White (June 10)

The pasty rock god returns with his second solo album. Expect stories of love and loss supported by a sturdy foundation of blues-inspired riffs.

Bang 3

Chief Keef (June 10)

That sound you'll hear is the Internet exploding the day the sophomore release from Chicago's notorious rap phenom drops.

In the Lonely Hour

Sam Smith (June 17)

Not all summer releases are sunny. Bet on the debut album from this British star (seen on "SNL" and heard on Disclosure's "Latch") being soulful and dark.

1000 Forms of Fear

Sia (July 8)

She's responsible for a lot of your favorite pop hits (Rihanna's "Diamonds," Ne-Yo's "Let Me Love You"). Her new tune "Chandelier" is already rocketing up the charts, building anticipation for her first new album in four years.

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

In many ways, Mariah Carey—who's either deeply troubled, absolutely bat[bleep] crazy or both—was Britney Spears before Britney Spears. Both were young artists kept on a tight leash who skyrocketed to astronomical fame, then cracked and got real weird for a few years until the inevitable comeback. The difference is that Mariah legitimately has a phenomenal voice.

But instead of letting her powerful pipes stand as the centerpiece on the atrociously titled "Me. I Am Mariah ... The Elusive Chanteuse," said chanteuse has fallen victim to the trends of the times. She throws in as many back beats, beeps, boops, drum machines and vocal manipulations as possible. One track is actually called "Money ($ * / ...)" and features horns, Fabolous rhyming "hollandaise" with "lingerie" and ... WAIT, HOLLANDAISE AND LINGERIE DON'T RHYME.

You are Mariah [bleeping] Carey? The album's title suggests you know this. But do you recall that you have a five-octave vocal range? You are the opposite of the reason Auto-Tune was created.

Really, this isn't a terrible album, though. First single "#Beautiful" allows Mariah and guest Miguel to show off. "Make It Look Good" has a fun, sassy beat and makes good use of harmonica. Immediately following is "You're Mine (Eternal)," a lovely ballad that features juuuust a little too much background action. "You Don't Know What To Do" (feat. Wale) is a danceable little bit of funky disco.

Then we drop right back into the bog of weird. Mariah clearly was inspired by Beyonce's "Blue" and decided to feature her twins, Moroccan and Monroe (referred to as "Dembabies"), on "Supernatural." What happens when you can't do something better than Beyonce? Do it bigger! "Supernatural" is like "Blue" but with 90 percent more cooing, giggling, "I love you, Mommy" and Monroe saying, "I'm a chanteuse." To which Mariah replies, "I know you are, dahling" in her best Cruella de Vil voice.

So "MIAMTEC" is one half of a darn good album and one half of an album that makes me want to break things. I suppose that's not horrible from a woman who owns an actual ring that looks like a Ring Pop.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Gemini May 21-June 21

A new moon in your sign is helping you make a fresh start. Maybe you've decided to break up with someone, or perhaps you're feeling good about a relationship and you're ready to take things to the next level. Go for it.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Your lover could surprise you as a funky moon brings up some general weirdness. Maybe your partner has been secretly dating another person. Or perhaps your honey is thinking about proposing. Something big is afoot.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Mercury will be in your sign for a while, and this will increase your confidence. You'll enjoy talking and flirting and sharing your creative ideas. With dating, you'll find it a lot easier to introduce yourself to new people.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Friendly Venus is helping you get along better with your honey. You'll want to spend lots of time with your partner and just hang out together. Don't let outside pressures interfere. Simply celebrate your partnership and ignore everybody else.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Saturn is telling you to pay attention to details. Don't neglect important things like paying your bills or tending to your children and pets. You could feel spacey or distracted, but take care of domestic matters.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You could receive some good news as the sun increases your positive karma. Maybe that cutie you've been chasing will start paying attention to you. Or perhaps you'll receive some sort of raise or promotion. You deserve it.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Don't rush into things. Mercury is preparing to go into retrograde, which means you need more time to make a fully informed decision. Don't get engaged, don't elope and don't adopt a pound puppy.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Communicator Mercury is helping you to become more social. Accept every party invitation you receive. Agree to meet new people whenever you can. And don't be afraid to do some networking—you might stumble upon a great opportunity.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Peer pressure could be strong for you right now. The sun is stirring up some tension from friends or family members. Don't let them influence your decision too much.

Aries March 21-April 19

Mars is showing you that your romantic situation has more mystery to it than you might think. Perhaps your current partner has a secret past as a super spy. The plot thickens.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Venus is opposite your sign for a few weeks, which means that your romantic life could feel a little off balance. You probably need to take some time to reconsider what you're doing and make sure you're on the same page as your sweetheart.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Your work situation could be crazy this week, but don't let it damage your personal life. Make sure that you and your honey are spending quality time together. Jupiter says you can make it work.

Work harder, celebs

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com
» @TribLub

There was a $40 cover charge at Enclave in 2009 the night Doug Reinhardt—then-boyfriend of reality TV star Paris Hilton—made a scheduled appearance at the club. People paid it, mostly because they were hoping Hilton would join him, which she did. Once the couple and their entourage arrived, patrons stood shoulder-to-shoulder in front of the elevated VIP section to get a glimpse or photo of Hilton as she danced with Reinhardt and briefly spoke on the mic.

A lot has changed since then. After all, this is the nightclub industry we're talking about.

Hilton—no longer with Reinhardt—is now DJing at clubs rather than simply making appearances. Enclave closed and has been replaced by an arcade bar, Headquarters Beereade, scheduled to open this summer. And those celebrity nightclub appearances that were popular at Chicago clubs, including Jamie Foxx at the now-closed Le Passage and Snooki at the now-closed Manor, appear to be a thing of the past.

Enclave booked more celebrity appearances than anyone when this trend was at its most popular

BUMPIN' IN THE 'BURBS

When Mike Esterman books one of his clients for a club appearance in the Chicago area, it's usually in the suburbs. Brody Jenner of "The Hills" and "Keeping Up With the Kardashians" fame spun as a DJ last Friday at H.O.M.E. sports bar in Arlington Heights, whereas in the past he just had to show up to appearances at Enclave, Bull & Bear or McFadden's Restaurant and Saloon.

among clubs. According to Matt Deichl, former vice president of Downtown Entertainment, which owned Enclave, the club needed a creative way to fill a large space.

"In the beginning, it was cool just to have celebs in the room," said Deichl, who now owns Parliament nightclub. "But toward the end when we were doing it, people realized you sometimes can't see the celebs doing anything. We were always crossing our fingers that they would come in a good mood and get on the mic. The Black Eyed Peas performed during their appearance, but a lot of times people left disappointed [that] the celeb just sat in the corner or that they didn't get a picture with them."

Paris Club Bistro and Bar's upstairs club, Studio Paris, has been the city's top celebrity hangout in recent years but has stayed away from paying for appearances. Instead, it books entertainers who agree to perform on the makeshift stage, including big-name DJs such as Avicii and Steve Aoki and the occasional pop star. Co-owner R.J. Melman didn't reveal how much big-name acts are paid but says it's worth it. "We wouldn't keep doing it if it didn't work." He prefers to think of the shows (some of which are surprises, including an unannounced DJ set by Kaskade in September) as a thank you to customers.

So are other clubs across the country staying away from celeb appearances as well?

Deichl has seen many of the celeb booking agencies he worked closely with shut down. "One guy I worked with is now doing real estate and another is doing fitness," Deichl said.

Mike Esterman—who founded celebrity booking agency esterman.com and has spent nearly 15 years in the industry—said the booking business is alive and well. He did, however, admit that major cities such as Chicago, New York and Las Vegas have become enamored with electronic dance music and are opting for DJs rather than celeb appearances. Esterman said these cities are home to clubs that can actually afford the well-known DJs.

"The [DJ] trend has been going on now for a few years," Esterman said (and Deichl agreed). "It's a very expensive trend. That trend will pop like every other bubble does."

Kanye West and Kim Kardashian finally tied the knot Saturday at the Forte di Belvedere in Florence, Italy, after a weeklong pre-wedding celebration in two different countries, according to just about every news outlet that follows this kind of thing. West reportedly spoke for 20 minutes during the lavish affair, because he is Kanye West. Kardashian wore two dresses on the big day, E! Online reports: a Givenchy Haute Couture gown for the ceremony and a custom-designed Balmain dress for the reception, which was attended by approximately 200 guests.

Oh, to be rich and full of yourself.

KOMMERCIAL KANYE

Kanye West debuted the new song "God Level" in a commercial that aired Saturday and kicks off Adidas' "The Dream: All In Or Nothing" World Cup ad campaign. The clip features international soccer stars Dani Alves, Bastian Schweinsteiger, Luis Suarez, Xavi, Jordi Alba, Mesut Ozil, Robin van Persie and David Villa, according to Rolling Stone.

SAY NO TO PIZZA JOKES

Macaulay Culkin and his comedy cover band the Pizza Underground were booed off the stage and pelted with beer bottles over the weekend at the Dot to Dot Festival in Nottingham, England. Apparently the English don't like jokes, pizza or rock classics turned into songs that jokingly celebrate pizza, which is what The Pizza Underground is all about.
